Nicholas Bergin is a freelance organist and editor. He currently serves on the editorial and production staff of The American Organist magazine and does freelance copyediting for Ancient Faith Publishing and the University Press of Mississippi. For seven years, he served as the organist of First Presbyterian Church, Nashville, and during graduate school he held interim posts at the Church of St. Michael and St. George in St. Louis and Christ Church Cathedral, Indianapolis. A graduate of the Peabody Conservatory and the Indiana University Jacobs School of Music, his primary organ teachers were Donald Sutherland and Janette Fishell. He is also much indebted to his first piano teacher, Timothy Hester, a longtime faculty member at the University of Houston Moores School of Music.
